

SO THE PUBLIC MAY KNOW

The Interim Reimbursement Mechanism (IRM) is a measure applied by PhilHealth to provide health care institutions (HCIs) with emergency funds during unforeseen events like natural disasters, calamities and other fortuitous events. This mechanism was previously tapped to respond to disasters that ravaged parts of the country such as that experienced during typhoons Ondoy and Yolanda, and recently with the Taal Volcano eruption.

To prepare for a coordinated response to the pandemic which was just starting to unfold in March this year, HCIs including dialysis centers and lying-in clinics nationwide were allowed to apply for IRM equivalent to their three months' worth (90 days) of benefit claims in 2019. HCIs can opt to avail of the full three months' limit as computed or a portion thereof.

In late May 2020, recognizing the clustering of cases in NCR, Regions III, IV-A, IV-B, and VII, PhilHealth revised its strategy by scaling down releases only to these areas. Likewise, presence of referral facilities for Covid-19 patients was identified as a factor for targeted IRM releases. This was to ensure that sufficient funds were available for all citizens needing healthcare as well as guarantee sufficient support to the country's expanded targeted testing strategy.

Availment of the IRM was initiated by a letter of intent by the HCI and a signed Memorandum of Agreement, upon approval, between PhilHealth and the institution. Fund transfer is then made to respective regions to be released further to the institutions concerned. However, effective May 1, 2020, all releases were processed by the Head Office.

As of July 31, 2020, PhilHealth has released a total of P14.9 billion in IRM within the guidelines set by the Corporation. Being public funds, the IRM is subject to stringent government accounting and auditing rules and therefore requires liquidation by its recipient facilities. Liquidation of the IRM is by submission of a report to PhilHealth on the claims for patients that they have attended to during the period.
